

Fig.1.3 Damages on building façade due to storm.

The bearing structure of a tent has to be designed to extremely high wind actions. The safety regulations of tents normally consider this problem for severe hazard situations. Important is the anchoring of the cables into the ground. If the material is tearing, the situation is modified completely. The wind entering the tent may cause a so-called 'flying' building.