

The world of disasters in the World Disasters Report 1993 to 1999

The World Disasters Report is the only annual, interdisciplinary report focusing on disasters, from natural hazards to human-induced crises, and the millions of people affected by them. The report analyses cutting-edge issues, assesses practical methodologies, examines recent experience and collates a comprehensive disasters database.

It is backed by the expertise and resources of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, whose relief operations and National Societies in 175 countries make it the most extensive and experienced humanitarian network

The World Disasters Report 1999 looks at environmental trends, disasters and their implications; floods; Hurricane Mitch; institutional collapse and winter hunger in Russia; earthquakes in Afghanistan; and the effects of El Niño. The report tracks the humanitarian system: examining falling aid budgets and the SPHERE project for minimum standards in disaster response. Plus the comprehensive 25-year disasters database and Red Cross/Red Crescent listings. Fully illustrated, with maps and index.

The World Disasters Report 1998 examines cities and crisis, urban disasters; the toll of traffic accidents, shelter and reconstruction, and psychological support. It also analyses the 1997 eastern European floods, sanctions and Iraq, rebuilding Bosnia, refugee camp 'cities' and urban Red Cross action in Colombia. The report includes new data and full Red Cross/Red Crescent listings. Fully illustrated, with maps and index.

The World Disasters Report 1997 includes: the future of NGOs and the military-humanitarian relationship, as well as information management, epidemiological data for disasters, aid trends and disaster-response standards, China's floods, Caribbean natural hazards, the challenge of Somalia, and the former Soviet Union's re-emerging diseases. Plus a comprehensive 25-year disasters database and the International Federation's global activities. Indexed and fully illustrated. Maps.

The World Disasters Report 1996 includes: global population movements, causes and consequences; global food security; emergency food aid and nutrition, developmental relief, trends in aid, the Kobe earthquake; Rwanda; Oklahoma's trauma, DPR Korea's crisis meeting the need for systematic data; Code of Conduct update; full listings of National Societies and delegations; 25-year disasters database. Indexed and fully illustrated.

The World Disasters Report 1995 includes: UN sanctions and the humanitarian crisis; good disaster-relief practice; early warning monitoring; measuring the effects of evaluation, psychological support; surviving cyclones in Bangladesh; Ethiopia ten years on: success and failure in Rwanda; working in Somalia's grey zone. Fully illustrated.

The World Disasters Report 1994 includes: drought success in southern Africa; Somalia, challenges within the former Yugoslavia; Brazil's vulnerability; India's earthquake myths, Caucasus collapse; secrecy's role in disasters, anti-personnel mines; Chernobyl; African peace mechanisms; human rights and disasters; indigenous knowledge and response; and the full text of the Code of Conduct for disaster-relief agencies

The World Disasters Report 1993 – the pilot issue – includes: humanitarian gap: preparedness versus relief, role of foreign medical teams and military forces, equity in impact, media in disasters, AIDS, famine, flood, high winds, refugees, epidemics, earthquakes, volcanoes. Case histories from Uganda, Sudan, China, Bangladesh, Afghanistan, Peru, Zambia, Turkey, United States, Philippines. Fully illustrated.

And coming up... World Disasters Report 2000

The year 2000 edition of the World Disasters Report will examine man-made disasters: economic meltdown, chemical accidents and economic migrants. It will also look at the year in disasters 1999, and include: disaster database, aid trends and standards, and full Red Cross/Red Crescent listings.
