

Photo 25 - Timber floor construction

Note the herring-bone struts.

These serve to share concentrated loads between adjacent joists.

Photo 26 - Floor construction

Note that floor boards are laid at an angle to the joists.

This provides better diaphragm action, thus improving earthquake resistance